KINETIC DEPTH · CONCEPT BUILDS (FICTIONAL BRANDS) · OCT 2026

3 cinematic site builds, explained

Each of these is a working page we built as a concept to show how a film-style site sells. None is a paying client; the brands are invented. What moves, why it sells, and how long it took.

1 · NOCTRA — restaurant

What moves: one continuous scroll; the hero dims from day to night, dishes slide in on the scroll, the reservation button stays pinned. Why it sells: a menu page is read; a scene is felt. The booking button is never more than a thumb away. Build: 6 working days from brief to live.

2 · VITEA — wellness / D2C launch

What moves: a scrub-controlled product film (the bottle turns as you scroll), ingredient notes fade in at the right frame, a launch countdown. Why it sells: launches live or die on the first 8 seconds; the product is the hero, not the layout. Build: 5 working days plus the product shoot.

3 · HARBOURLINE HOUSE — prestige listing

What moves: aerial-to-interior transitions on scroll, room captions with the floor-plan highlight, an enquiry panel that follows. Why it sells: buyers of $1M+ homes decide which inspection to attend from the listing; a film beats a slideshow. Build: 4 working days from the photographer's files.

What every build includes: design, copy structure, deployment on our hosting, maintenance, speed and mobile checks, and the booking or enquiry form wired to your inbox.

Your site, free for the first 30 days (design to launch and maintenance). Book a free 15-minute session: kineticdepth.com/session · @kinetic.depth

Concept builds; brand names and figures are fictional examples of the format. Build times are our own, for similar scopes.